Current Comment

By R. H. K.

The opinions (if any) expressed herein, are not necessarily those of The Campbell Press.

Striking a fair average, and comprising a rather sad commentary on contemporary civilization, this morning's headlines are: Assassins Slay Four In Shanghai; Bomb Fires Haifa Riot, Score Killed; Strom Held In $58,000 Bank Theft; F. R. Methods Cause Slump, Says Landon; Ex-Deputy Slain In New Violence At Harlan Trial; 20 Called In Graft Quiz Today.

Observing, with bombs and bullets, the first anniversary of China's armed resistance to Japanese invasion, assassins (I don't quite understand why the press refers to them as assassins in a land where everyone is bent on exterminating everyone else) today were responsible for the wounding of several people, and the deaths of two Japanese and two Chinese. The casualties in this instance balance the scales and the report is, we trust, more accurate than that which asserts Japanese bombers sunk a dozen troop-laden junks near Kiukiang, current Japanese objective.

Yesterday more than a score of Jews and Arabs met death in a race riot at Haifa, the Holy Land. Eighteen Arabs and five Jews were killed in the street fighting, which was the bloodiest seen there since the World war. So runs the newspaper account. And behind it all lurks the grisly spectre of Intolerance, licking its chops, and thinking, "Things are looking up for me."

David Strom, formerly chief teller in a San Jose branch bank, who a year ago walked out with about $58,000 of the bank's funds, was yesterday captured by F. B. I. men in Seattle. The fugitive had been living the life of a wealthy clubman, and had gone through all but about $8,000 of "his" funds. There were a great many people, myself included, who thought that the erstwhile teller, if he was smart enough to engineer theft on such a grand scale, would be smart enough to get out of the country and live quietly on his spoils. It appears that we who held that belief are no more astute than the culprit, whose mode of living took him to a city he evidently thought sufficiently far removed from the scene of his depredations so that he could enjoy the night spots without fear of detection. It is in line here to utter the trite "crime does not pay," but we'll skip that and wonder, instead, why it is that the untraveled of any commonwealth is so firm in his belief that the state line constitutes the ends of the earth.

Alf. M. Landon, last Republican aspirant to the presidency of these United States, says the depression was brought on by New Deal methods. There is truth in that, perhaps, but the situation can, in my opinion, be laid with greater fairness upon the steps of selfishness, and upon our national inability to embrace an optimistic outlook. The markets are here, the means of production are here, labor is here, and capital—in fact, all the things that make for prosperity. Suspicion, greed on both sides of the fence, and the attitude of supreme indifference adopted by those who "have" must be abolished before any administration can bring the country out of the shadow of depression.

The affair at London, Ky., is a fine example of the pass to which things can come when greed and selfishness have the upper hand. Resort to violence, coercion, and all-round skullduggery on the part of Harlan coal operators have resulted in one of the foulest smells ever to emanate from southern coal fields.

The graft quiz headline will have to comment on itself. I'm too tired—and besides I've run out of space.

NEWS ITEM:—U.S.S.R. FACTORIES ORDERED TO ADOPT AMERICAN INDUSTRIAL METHODS

Directors Meet At Kiwanis Lunch Here Tuesday

A director's meeting together with reports and discussion of the sewage project occupied the attention of the Kiwanis Club at Tuesday's meeting, necessitating the postponement of convention reports until next week.

President Purmort presided for the last time for some weeks, and during his absence vice-president Dr. W. R. Morgan will conduct the affairs of the club.

The club voted Tuesday to send six Campbell boys to the youths' Y. M. C. A. camp in the Santa Cruz mountains for a week's vacation and training in camp life.

On July 19 the club will hold the first of its annual summer ladies' nights. These pleasant occasions occur yearly on the third Tuesdays of July, August and September.

MEDLOCKS HOSTS TO FRIENDS, RELATIVES

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Medlock entertained a small group of friends and relatives on Tuesday evening in their home on Garfield avenue, San Jose. The party was in honor of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mrs. Medlock's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Purmort.

One very happy feature of the affair was the presence of four of the guests who attended the wedding, Mrs. Ada L. Hart and Miss Una Hart of Los Angeles; Mrs. Fred Smith of Saratoga, and A. A. Purmort of Campbell.

Other guests were Fred Smith, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Horrum and Mrs. Ruth Stone of San Jose.

A very pleasant evening was spent in visiting and reminiscing and enjoying the dainty refreshments served by the hostess.

LOCAL REAL ESTATE OFFICE IS ACTIVE

Ernest Furtado of San Jose purchased a one acre tract on Casey road from E. Berard, on which he has a new home nearing completion.

Marriage licenses were issued Tuesday to Herbert Brown of Somesbar, Siskiyou county, and Bonnie Arnold of Campbell who gave their ages as 32 and 23 respectively.

Another couple both of whom named Campbell as their residence who were among Tuesday's licensees were Nicholas Stevens, 33 and Lila Jones, 28.

GOVERNMENT CROP MEDDLERS WARNED

H. F. O'Neal, farmer living west of Noblesville, Ind., has erected a sign in front of his farm. It says: "Government crop meddlers keep off this place. We own this land and expect to run our own business. Stay out."

MARK PURMORTS TO EMBARK ON EXTENDED TOUR

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Purmort are leaving Monday on the beginning of what they plan to be an extended trip covering many states of the Union.

Their first objective will be Spokane, Wash., where they will visit Miss Lee Gillis, a niece who made her home with the Purmorts for several years. Continuing eastward they will visit relatives in Minnesota, their old home state, then on through Wisconsin and the north central states to New York and the Atlantic seaboard.

The return journey will take them through the southern states and bring them back to southern California for the Kiwanis state convention at Santa Monica in October.

"Mark" who is president of the local Kiwanis Club aims to visit as many clubs as possible during his travels.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Strong will occupy the Purmort home during their absence.

WANDA GRIZZLE BRIDE-ELECT OF CLIFFORD MYERS

Miss Wanda Grizzle has announced her engagement to Clifford O. Myers of Los Angeles, the news being disclosed at a buffet supper given recently by her mother, Mrs. Josie Grizzle at her home in San Jose.

The buffet table was attractively decorated with bright hued flowers and the announcement cards bearing the names of the couple were found inclosed in the napkins.

Miss Grizzle completed her schooling at the Santa Clara high school. The attractive young lady is also a daughter of Orrie Grizzle.

Her fiancé is a nephew of Mrs. Arthur L. Myers of Los Angeles and after their wedding which will take place in the early autumn the young people will reside in southern California.

Miss Helen Kalas recently spent a week in Los Angeles as guest of Mrs. Harry Fore, returning to Campbell with her hostess and daughters, Lucile and Eldana. The latter are spending the summer here with their aunt Mrs. M. E. Mumma, and Mrs. Fore is dividing her time between her sister, and her mother, Mrs. Denhart, in San Jose.

Dan Yeager In Chair At Carriers' Convention, S. J.

The Rural Letter Carriers state convention held in San Jose this week passed off very successfully under the direction of John W. Haynes of San Jose president of the local branch, and Daniel A. Yeager, convention chairman.

Figures and statistics as a rule are not especially interesting, but some that were brought out in connection with this convention are of significance to Campbell.

The first rural mail system in the west and the second in the United States was established at Campbell, February 1, 1897.

Driving horses and carts, three carriers started out from here on that date to inaugurate the west's first rural mail delivery. Each carrier traveled 25 miles a day, and was paid $300 a year for his services, including his own equipment. The three served a population of 1600 people in the vicinity of Campbell and delivered 61,522 pieces of mail the first year.

Daniel A. Yeager now Campbell's only rural carrier, drives 38 miles a day by automobile, serves 576 boxes and 2200 persons and often delivers as many as 30,000 pieces of mail a month.

McKinnon Vice President of Mission Trails

Supervisor J. M. McKinnon was elected vice president of the Mission Trails Exposition Commission at a meeting held in Salinas recently.

Comprising two representatives from each of the seven Mission Trails counties and appointed by the board of supervisors of these counties, the Mission Trails Exposition Commission has been at work many months preparing for the group exhibit at the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition.

A building of outstanding beauty is now under construction on Treasure Island in San Francisco bay. Of unique composite Mission design, this building will house exhibits of agriculture, floriculture, recreation, education, transportation and industry as well as an hundred foot diorama depicting the scenic splendor of the Mission trails area.

McKinnon has been appointed to act as chairman of the auditing and finance committee, and Russell E. Pettit of San Jose represents this county on the budget promotion and advertising committee of five members, of which Claude Arnold, San Luis Obispo, is chairman.

Qualified applicants may be enlisted and transferred to San Diego within a few days of date of application.

Application blanks or additional information may be obtained at the local post office, or by writing to the Marine Corps Recruiting station, 46 Federal Office building, San Francisco.

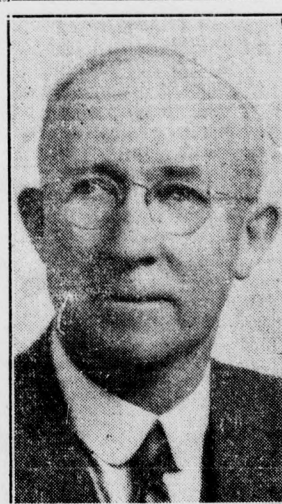

MARGARET BOWLING TO WED OHIOAN

Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Bowling announce the coming marriage of their daughter, Margaret Helen, to Harold Wilson Davis of Winchester, Ohio, to be held at the Methodist Church in Campbell, Thursday evening, July 14 at 8 o'clock.

Friends are invited to the ceremony and the reception at the parsonage following the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Mumma enjoyed a vacation trip the last week of June, spending two days in Yosemite with Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Cramer, one day in Carmel with Mrs. Mumma's sister and a day in Santa Cruz with her brother.

Earl Colby Seeks Assembly Seat

EARL A. COLBY

Believing that agriculture, and the fruit industry especially, should be represented in the state legislature, Earl A. Colby of 81 South 17th street, San Jose, announced this week that he will file as a candidate for assemblyman from the 31st district. He is a registered Republican.

At present employed by the Santa Clara Packing company, he has been identified with the fruit business in this valley for the past 26 years as a grower, one-time county president of the Farmers' Union, on one of the original organizing committees of the California Prune and Apricot Growers association, and as a packing house superintendent.

He formerly resided in Moreland district, where he was a school director.

Fraternally he is a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason.

Feeling that too many empty promises are made, he announced: "My only promise is that I will give this assembly district as honest and upright representation as it is possible for me to perform. It will be my constant endeavor to promote such legislation as will benefit the greater proportion of the voters and taxpayers."

"I believe in the maintaining of our high standards of education and social welfare, and in a reduction of state expenditures where possible, thereby reducing the tax burden. The American standard of living should not be lowered to compete with cheap foreign labor. Industry should be allowed to reach a peaceful and economic balance in order to put more labor to work and reduce unemployment."

Local Cooperative Builds Warehouse

Work on the large warehouse being erected over the dehydrator tunnels of the Campbell Cooperative dryer at the corner of Central avenue, across from the Campbell Packing Corporation, is being rushed by a crew under R. H. Sund of Los Gatos. He expects to have it completed in a little more than a weeks time.

Beside the cooperative plant and with which it is affiliated, the California Prune and Apricot Growers are having constructed a receiving plant, forms and concrete foundations for which are rapidly being made.

The building is to be three stories in height, 58 feet wide and 122 feet long. G. K. Schrader, local manager for the association states that the plant will be entirely modern and up to date with all equipment necessary for receiving and handling dried prunes. The Bridge Construction company has the contract for the building.

These two plants are concrete evidence of their companies' faith in the ultimate future of the dried fruit industry of the valley.

Miss Helen Stray went to Berkeley this morning where she will spend a few days with Miss Elsie Merrill who is attending the summer session of U. C.

County Board to Consider Proposed Sanitary District

Action relative to the formation of Campbell's sanitation district moves on apace, with the county board of supervisors having set August 15 as the date for a public hearing when the proponents and oppositionists may state their cases before the board.

This step was taken Tuesday at the board meeting, following the presentation by Dr. W. I. Merrill of a petition signed by 28 Campbell residents and a map of the proposed district which covers a 500 acre district.

The estimated cost of $132,000 would provide a sewage system for 1500 residents. C. C. Kennedy Los Gatos engineer explained that the sewer pipes here would lead into a pipe which would enter the San Jose outfall sewer line near North Fifth street and Burton avenue. The city of San Jose has agreed to allow this arrangement for an annual rental, if the election is favorable.

Attorney William J. Lock of San Mateo who has been retained to represent the Campbell residents stated that approximately 40 per cent of the cost of the project will be financed by WPA funds which previously have been sought, and that the project has been approved, if the district is formed.

The legal notices of petition to organize sanitary district and hearing on the report and proposal are published in this issue of the Campbell Press.

Dr. Merrill has worked tirelessly on this project which has involved countless interviews, meetings and trips here, there and everywhere. He and his committee have certainly demonstrated their faith in the desirability and possibility of providing sanitation for this rapidly growing population and increasing school attendance.

July 21 Marks Final Day of Registration

Attention of voters is called to the fact that July 21 is the last day for registration for the August 30 primary election.

Registration may be made in Campbell at the G. E. Farley real estate office.

Those who should register are persons who have or will have attained the age of 21 by August 30 and have not previously registered, any who have moved since their last registration, or who did not vote at either the August primary or November election in 1936.

The area included in the former three Campbell precincts and considerable contiguous territory was realigned and five new precincts were created some months ago, named Campbell 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. All registration changes resulting from these adjustments have been made at the county registration office and the voters do not have to attend to that, unless one has moved from the precinct in which his registration was recorded at the 1936 elections and has not been changed by him since.

After 20 years ...

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Exactly 20 years ago little Czechoslovakia emerged from ruins of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Today, on her birthday anniversary, is she being swallowed by Germany? Since Hitler's Austrian coup more than half her frontier teems with Nazi activity. Here live Sudeten Germans who seek autonomy and eventual annexation by Germany. The Sudetens grieve because their trade was stifled when they were joined to Czechoslovakia in 1919. But they are making mountains of molehills.

1 President of Czechoslovakia is Eduard Benes (shown with his wife), one of Europe's smartest little statesmen. To pacify Sudetens he has made many concessions, seeking meanwhile to maintain the principles of Thomas Garrigue Masaryk, father of the Czech republic. But when he closed the German border during a recent election, two Sudetens were shot. Nazis made much of it.

2 No heroes ever received more elaborate funerals than the two Sudeten "victims," who could have saved their lives by obeying regulations. The world was made to watch the burial service, a much-publicized event admittedly designed to inflame Sudetens against the Czech government. Meanwhile President Benes kept his fingers crossed during a period of European high tension unequaled since World war days.

3 Leading the Sudetens and other Czech Nazis is Konrad Henlein, close friend of Adolf Hitler. Of the nation's 15,000,000 people, probably one-fourth answer his beck and call.

4 Although Czechoslovakia's frontier is mountainous (the treaty-makers intended it that way) she is rushing a first line of defense against Germany. This special trench is one of many in a series of fortifications comparable only to France's famous Maginot line.

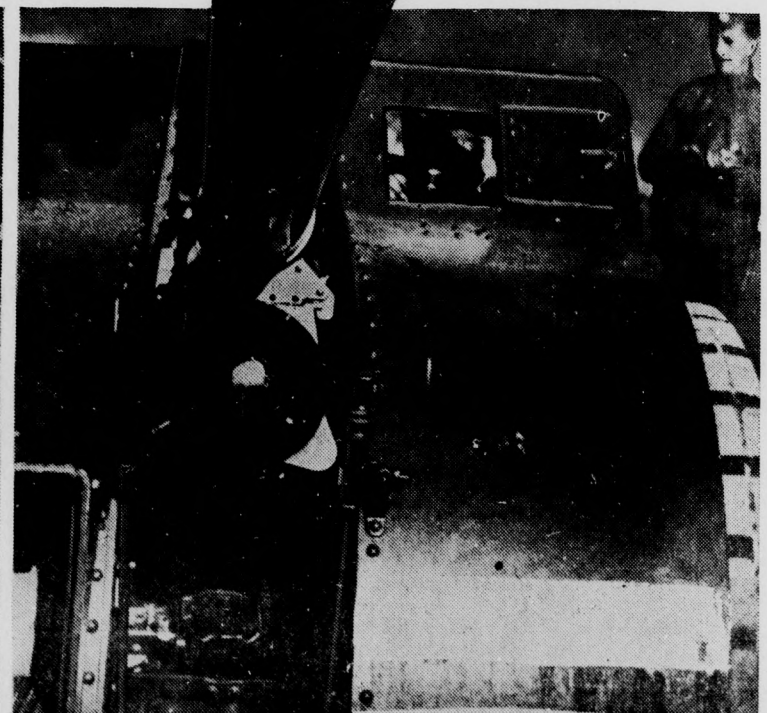

5 Czechoslovakia's peacetime army is 180,000 strong, with 1,000,000 trained reserves. More reserves are being trained.

6 All Europe envies Czechoslovakia's famous munition industry, long an important business in the Sudeten area. This strategic weakness is being overcome by construction of a new armaments center at Bystrice, in Slovakia, far from the German border. The Czech army is perhaps the best armed small force in Europe, strong in artillery, anti-aircraft, tanks and machine guns. But it is no match for Germany's machine.

7 Thus in 1938, as she celebrates 20 years of peaceful progress, little Czechoslovakia points bristling weapons at the world, hoping that she need never use them but certainly not afraid to fight. To France and Russia she looks for assistance in the event of invasion, but the Czechs are hemmed in by none-too-friendly neighbors who may cut off her allies. Moreover, who can depend on allies in the year 1938?

New Orchard Heater Tested
New hope of revolutionizing the defense of California orchardists against frost are hinging on a smokeless heater developed by C. H. S. Littleton, Hermosa Beach inventor. Tested in the grove of City Treasurer Carp P. Pegler at Sierra Madre, witnesses said, the heater was found to generate from two and a half to four and a half times as much heat as standard models.

Sarah Lynn leaned back in a great deep chair which made her seem childishly small, and the aviator stretched himself flat again, his hands folded behind his yellow head.

"This was the one I liked," Jordan said, his fingers halting.

"But I shall go down from this airy space, this swift white peace, this stinging exultation;

And time will close about me, and my soul stir to the rhythm of the daily round,

Yet, having known, life will not press so close,

And always I shall feel time ravel thin about me,

For once I stood

In the white windy presence of eternity."

Sarah Lynn felt a little shiver of appreciation. She had known it, the swift white peace, the stinging exultation. Life would never press too close on her, on Gunnar; they wouldn't let it! They were not earth-bound; they had dominion.

Jordan played on and on, quietly now, with a conviction of serenity and permanence, and the crimson of the hearth died down to a hot, gray ash. It seemed to Sarah Lynn that her heart must literally burst with its weight of surging happiness.

Gunnar let Sarah Lynn take the Hermod up alone one day and stood waiting proudly while she brought it smoothly and beautifully to earth. It was her accolade: sign and symbol of his utter trust.

They walked on the shore beside the blue, bright water and he took her in his arms. "So," he said, lifting his head after a long kiss, "you are fearless, also wise. You fly safely and skillfully my Hermod. I love you."

Sarah Lynn pulled herself out of his embrace to look up at him. "Gunnar, do you love me? Me?"

"Have I not said—"

"I know. But I mean—is it only because I've learned to fly properly? Because I'm not afraid? Because I do the kind of things you like? Or is it—myself?"

He laughed aloud. "This is a folly, I love you because you are you—without fear, and wise, a good flier. It is answered."

"No, but"—there was a shadow in the eyes of the queer, dark Dana girl. "Don't you think we ought to care for people themselves, not for what they do? Not even for what they are? I think—"

"It needs no thinking," he said.

"But—Gunnar, suppose—suppose I stopped flying?"

"Suppose you stopped living? Enough of folly! We finish!" He kissed her again.

Lynn Dana wrote to his traveling cousin:

"I wish you were here to see them now, Sally Ann. By and by, I suppose, an inexorable calendar will catch them and clip their wings, but now they are soaring!

"Their visit at Jordan's Tahoe lodge seemed to set them free. They are armored against everything now, even poor Cousin Adelaide. They say little of plans but I gather they are to marry in a fortnight and go at once to Norway where he has excellent prospects.

"I think—at least, I suspect—that they will fly the Atlantic in the Hermod, in complete secrecy. I doubt if they will even tell me.

"Of course I shall miss them blankly, bleakly; it doesn't need your nimble and trained imagination to understand how much of flavor and fragrance will go out of things, but I shall manage to rejoice for our dark duckling hatched into an eagle's mate.

"There's something lyric, something mythical and symbolic about their romance: partly, I suppose, because of its evanescent quality, because they are looking constantly into the bright face of danger. It's hard to imagine them middle-aged and portly; I can't see beyond youth for them.

"Doubtless this is all because I'm a little low in my mind on another count. Granny is going down hill very perceptibly, and it gets me. Everything dimming—eyes, ears; a slowing down all around. She senses it of course, and she loathes it.

"So, then! Sorry you're missing the skylarks but glad you are being spared the matriarch's defeat."

Her great-grandmother's condition was evident even to Sarah Lynn's high-keyed preoccupation, and she ached with pity and protest. The old woman sent for her and went at once to the point.

"Sairy Lynn, I guess I don't need to tell you I'm getting older every minute."

"I know, Great-granny." She took a small, lean claw in her warm grasp. "And I wish I could give you twenty years."

"The last ones? Think now, looking so far ahead, that you won't want 'em? Well, you will, let me tell you; you'll want 'em worst way. And you'll know you can't have 'em. Well, I'm obliged to you for the wish."

"I'm sorry," Sarah Lynn said. "Oh, Great-granny, I wish there was something I could do!"

"Well, there is," the nonagenarian said briskly. "That's what I'm getting at. That's why I sent for you. I know you're getting married and putting out, quick's ever you can, Sairy Lynn, and that's right. I want you should. But there's a favor you could do me first."

"Anything!" she said gladly. "Anything I can—"

"I should admire to have a ride in your flying-machine, Sairy Lynn."

"Of course, Great-granny! I'd adore it."

"Well, there's plenty that won't," she said grimly. "When the folks hear of it there'll be the devil to pay and no pitch hot, but I don't care. I've got a hankering to see what it's like. I want to ride up in the sky and look down at birds flapping their wings that I always envied, and I want to look down at Danavale and all the foolish

we had to make the loads light, and he was young and stout. I'd admire to have him here, today, looking down like I am. Well, forevermore! If that's all Mt. Hamilton amounts to, and the way I've been looking up at it for eighty-odd years! My, but the air's nice up here, Sairy Lynn! Awful light and thin . . . Makes a body drowsy . . ."

The flier looked back and saw her nodding. It was too bad to let her lose an instant of this thrill. She executed a mild side slip and the old woman sat up with a jerk and grinned at her.

"Hey, Sairy Lynn! What you up to? Trying to spill me out?" She looked down with renewed animation but very soon she was sleepy again.

Sarah Lynn waited until she had her full attention and then she inquired, both by words which she knew could not be heard and by unmistakable gestures whether she was ready to descend.

She shook her head violently. "No! No! I don't want to go down!"

"Enough of folly. We finish!"

houses the folks built and the road your Gre-gramp and I come over in the covered wagons, dirty and dog-tired and snailing along with the half-dead critters hauling us. I want to do that once before I die."

"And you shall, Great-granny, dear," she told her. "I promise—cross my heart!" Gunnar would loan her the Hermod for this ritual.

CHAPTER XI

It was a pretty day. Gunnar approved the weather, and he warmly approved the project. It was exactly what he wished he might have done for Grandmother Gudrun.

Lynn Dana was deeply pleased. "She gave you your wings; right to share them with her," he nodded.

The colony came, the protestants, at least, anxious, indignant, annoyed, and the harried Emma Waters kept saying, "Now, Miss Dana, where's your handkerchief? Miss Dana, you went and took your knitted jacket off!"

Wrapped like a little old royal mummy, she was finally lifted into the cabin of the Hermod in Gunnar's long arms.

"I'm obliged to you, young feller," she thanked him. "And I'm real pleased about you and my child. I've set store by Sairy Lynn from the first minute I laid eyes on her in the cradle. I believe you're going to make her a good husband."

"I will make her a good husband," he told her gravely, fastening the seat belt about her, getting out again, passing through the group of disapproving faces.

The matriarch rapped on the window with her lean knuckles and waved at her elderly daughters, her middle-aged granddaughters, and gave her shrill, cackling laugh.

"Now, go on home and don't fret," she admonished them, "you poor old things!"

Then Sarah Lynn Dana took her ship away from the pleasant landscape into the calm skies, carrying the ninety-seven-year-old pioneer who had crossed the plains in a covered wagon to found the dynasty of Danavale.

Sarah Lynn looked back at her often and every time she smiled all over her small parchment face and waved a claw.

"I'm having the best time I ever had in all my born days, Sairy Lynn," she chirped, unaware that her wavering treble did not carry over the sound of the motor. "Beats everything. Even the first day in the wagon-train, and the day we knew we was in California. My land, what would your Gre-gramp think of this?" She gave a little crow of triumph. "Well, poor Hank! When I think how he come across the continent, most of the way a-foot, 'cause we lost so many critters and we had to make the loads light, and he was young and stout. I'd admire to have him here, today, looking down like I am. Well, forevermore! If that's all Mt. Hamilton amounts to, and the way I've been looking up at it for eighty-odd years! My, but the air's nice up here, Sairy Lynn! Awful light and thin . . . Makes a body drowsy . . ."

The flier looked back and saw her nodding. It was too bad to let her lose an instant of this thrill. She executed a mild side slip and the old woman sat up with a jerk and grinned at her.

"Hey, Sairy Lynn! What you up to? Trying to spill me out?" She looked down with renewed animation but very soon she was sleepy again.

Sarah Lynn waited until she had her full attention and then she inquired, both by words which she knew could not be heard and by unmistakable gestures whether she was ready to descend.

She shook her head violently. "No! No! I don't want to go down!"

Gunnar comforted Sarah Lynn in the difficult days which followed. "Do not listen to the wailing," he admonished her.

"But they say I killed her, Gunnar."

"And I say you gave to her life again. Not choking in blankets but boldly in the sky, as she would wish, that small grandmother. Age closed her in like a trap, you opened the door."

"Oh, I know! But, I keep dreaming of her, huddled down in her seat, swinging over the belt—"

"That is folly. Think of her looking down with pleasure."

"Yes. Only I did so want her at my wedding. It isn't going to be a very nice wedding, Gunnar."

He shrugged. "What matter? It is a wedding. That is enough. Then we go!"

They were walking back to her house from an evening with Lynn Dana.

"Gunnar, I promise, I'll stop grieving about Great-granny."

"That is well. Death in age, in sickness, in helplessness is good. All such should be put away."

She came out of her mood of exaltation with a cry of protest. "Oh, Gunnar—no! That's horrible!"

"Man," he persisted, "must learn from Nature. To let survive—how do you say it?"

"The survival of the fittest, but who can say, who can judge and decide who is the fittest? Don't you see what a frightful danger it would be? How wicked people could bribe and corrupt—And some of the finest minds and spirits are in frail bodies. Do you want a world full of prize-fighters? Think!"—she said hotly—"think of my Uncle Lynn!"

He shrugged. "You speak now of the exception. That would be bad. But in the end, after five hundred years, would not the race be greatly improved?"

Sarah Lynn wasn't interested in the state of the race five hundred years ahead. She was disturbed. Gunnar had aired those ideas before, but never so vehemently.

She had to put herself to sleep that night resolutely, remembering the thrilling beauty of the plane against the moon.

But she kept her promise to stop mourning over the death of the ancestress. All her loyal cohorts helped, and a long, understanding cable from Sally Ann, and most of all, the man in the wheeled-chair.

"Let's put a period to it, Sarah Lynn," he said. "You were privileged to pay back in an hour what you owe her all your life. She gave you your freedom; you gave her hers."

So peace came back to Sarah Lynn for her last days in Danavale. She said to her father, "Dad, I'm to be married in Great-granny's parlor Monday morning at nine, and then we're flying east. I wanted you to know. I'm telling Bill, too."

Forester Experiences Many Problems in His Efforts to Use Denuded Lands

Those unfamiliar with the many problems besetting the forester in his efforts to reforest denuded lands often wonder why there should be a high mortality on many hand-planted plantations. In some instances this has run 100 per cent, and the entire area must be replanted. Usually foresters expect from 20 to 30 per cent mortality and are happy with a survival of 70 to 80 per cent. In fact, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News, they plan on this when the first trees are set by over-planting the land at least 30 per cent. If fortune should smile on the efforts and all the trees lived, eventually the stands would have to be thinned out.

In recent years drouth and extreme heat have raised havoc with many pine tree plantations. The seedlings didn't have much chance to survive, and those that did were stunted.

Frequently the choice of the planting site brings failure, particularly if it happens to be in a frost pocket or on extremely sterile soil. Poor planting perhaps runs second to drouth and heat. If the seedling roots are not properly placed in the ground and completely covered with soil the chances are the tree will die. Freezing also contributes, as well as snow damage. Insects, rust and fungus growth often wipe out plantations, and this is a problem for which no satisfactory means of control has been uncovered. During the winter when snows cover all but the tops of the small trees rabbits and mice often girdle the terminal branches, dwarfing the growth, and if completely girdled farther down the tree will die. In some instances the young trees are destroyed by persons wandering aimlessly over the plantations and stepping on the seedlings.

Unlike planting around the home where water, shade and protection abound, the forest-planted seedling must shift for itself, and if the elements are unkind its life is short.

"Alright," Not Good Word

There is no such word as "alright" recognized in modern English usage. For a period during the Twelfth and Thirteenth centuries before the invention of printing, the form "alright" was used to some extent by English writers, but the phrase "all right" had been previously preferred and it has been regarded as the correct form ever since.

Pension Petitions Filed

Sacramento.—Petitions for a "self-redeeming" pension plan to be submitted on the November ballot are on file in the office of Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan. The initiative proposed payment of $30 weekly to every person over 50. Each eligible applicant, it was pointed out, would be issued certificates by the states. Holders of certificates would be required to affix 2-cent stamps to make them transferable. At the end of a year the stamp tax of a $1 certificate would be $1.04. The petition failed to stipulate the amounts in which the certificates would be issued. It further directed that the governor appoint an administrator for the program at an annual salary of $7,800 and stated the official be Roy G. Owens or Will H. Kindig, both of Los Angeles, or J. C. Elliott of Anaheim.

Red Bluff.—The new radio directional beacon and teletype weather observatory will be in operation at the municipal airport here not later than October 1st. This was the assurance of C. O. Davidson, division superintendent, and R. W. Schmidt, airport engineer of the United Air Lines. They have completed the contract with the City of Red Bluff for using the airport. William C. Schmidt, Portland contractor, is here and will commence construction of the light beacon and beam tower as soon as the steel arrives.

$13,000,000 Dole Costs Los Angeles.—The Los Angeles County Relief Administration is ending its fiscal year with a total expenditure of about $13,000,000 for the year. Unemployed men and women without means are supported by its dole until they can be transferred to the Federal Works Progress Administration—when it is possible to do so. The State-financed body now is caring for about 23,000 families and single persons and the June cost will be approximately $1,200,000. The case load now is 748 less than it was a month ago. The L.A.C.R.A. carries about one-half the entire load borne by the State Relief Administration, of which it is the local unit.

SUMMER SCOURGE

AMERICANS are enjoying a health security undreamed of by their grandfathers. Medical science has mastered such once deadly epidemic diseases as cholera, yellow fever, and typhus. The mortality rate from appendicitis has been enormously reduced from its rate of incidence in 1900.

But stubborn foes still remain to challenge the victorious onward march of man and medical science.

Summer's worst scourge, infantile paralysis, remains unbeaten. Chicago's epidemic last summer defied the most valiant efforts of medicine's counter-attack. In recent years California has also been host to this unwelcome visitor.

These words are written not to disturb parents, but merely to impress upon them the need of especially watchful care over children during the summer months. Dr. Walter Scott Franklin of Santa Barbara, member of the medical faculty of the University of California for 25 years, and active in the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, pointed out to California parents recently this worthy reminder, "Warm weather is the best friend of poliomyelitis—cold weather its deadliest foe."

Simple, healthful living habits, as ever, remain the surest guarantee of a sound body. For that, there is no substitute.

SCHOOLHOUSE NEWS

THE LITTLE RED SCHOOLHOUSE has long since hit the dust, and the hickory stick has become just another pick-axe handle.

Today it appears that another traditional emblem of the American public school system has one foot in the grave—the slate blackboard. New York city's board of education will experiment in schools during the coming fall with a white or green glassboard.

The idea is to save money and eyesight. The familiar blackboard has to be reconditioned in one or two years, but not—so it's said—the white glassboard. Trampling further on the cherished slate board, the educators declare its gloomy, grayish color causes undue eye-strain. Wherefore they're dabbled with the white glassboard which will be written upon with black chalk. It is rumored that the three R's will continue to be taught.

Though the blackboard may be gathered unto its forebears—the little red schoolhouse and the hickory stick—they still don't know what to call this new wall tablet. It isn't a blackboard. It isn't a glass blackboard, nor a white blackboard, nor a glass whiteboard, nor a white glassboard.

Well, whether they name it, and whether or not it makes the blackboard a relic of the past, we predict the flying spitball will survive unabated, come what may.

MORPHINE AND MUNITIONS

AN UNASSUMING REPORT made by the League of Nations secretariat to the narcotics advisory committee the other day revealed a disturbing truth about the way the business of killing and pain-killing go hand in hand.

Between 1925 and 1930, it was disclosed, the lawful world production of dangerous narcotics exceeded by 90 tons the world's medical needs. The surplus found its way into the channels of illicit traffic.

Between 1931 and 1935 the lawful world production almost exactly coincided with the world's medical needs.

But in 1936 the lawful world production of morphine suddenly and strangely increased by six tons. Known stocks had not increased. Export lists gave no clue. Statistical "detectives" began an exhaustive process of investigation and elimination.

Then the simple truth of the matter came out. Military powers had been stocking up with morphine in a big way in preparation for the next storm of international violence. Existing treaties do not require the Powers to make their stocks known when narcotics are intended for such purposes.

While nations arm to kill, they also arm to kill pain. Morphine, like munitions, also helps win wars. Barbarism and humanitarianism make strange bedfellows, but they are no stranger than the age in which we live where the forces of enlightenment and destruction each struggle for supremacy.

JOBS FOR AMERICANS

Only Americans can work for America!

This was the strange dictum which issued from Washington two weeks ago and which went into effect last Thursday.

It is curious because it applied to federal employees. All these, everyone assumed, were by the very nature of their positions required to be American citizens. Such, strange to say, has not been the case.

It is high time that the housecleaning order was put into effect. Generous as Uncle Sam is, there must be limits to his bounty. Federal jobs for American citizens—this should be one strict line of demarcation.

The Golden Text will be: "Let us keep the feast, not with old leaven, neither with the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (I Cor. 5: 8). Bible selections will include the following passage from John 15: 12-14: "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook will also be included, which reads as follows: "Implicit faith in the Teacher and all the emotional love we can bestow on him, will never alone make us imitators of him. We must go and do likewise, else we are not improving the great blessings which our Master worked and suffered to bestow upon us" (p. 25).

The FARMERS CORNER

by RALPH H. TAYLOR

Executive Secretary
Agricultural Council of California

There is a growing realization on the part of the public at large that labor wars—paralyzing businesses and industries, throwing tens of thousands out of employment and disrupting trade and orderly development—have been a major factor in plunging the nation from depression into recession.

In California, particularly, strikes and other labor disturbances have brought terrific losses, with rival labor czars, in their stampede for power, riding rough shod over the rights of both workers and employers and openly resorting to violence, coercion and intimidation to achieve their ends.

With the state already staggering under an unbearable relief load, industrial tieups have compelled thousands of workers to walk out on their jobs and join the tremendous army of 825,000 persons now supported in California by the dole.

Farmers have been denied the right to drive their own trucks to city markets, or to have their farm hands deliver their produce. Trucks have been stopped and in some cases overturned. Other farmers, at harvest time, have had their crops branded as "hot cargo"; still others have suffered heavy losses because of maritime strikes which prevented shipment of their commodities.

In the face of such conditions, it has become imperative that steps be taken to restore law and order and to eliminate labor abuses such as jurisdictional wars, "sit-down" and stay-in strikes, hot cargo boycotts, interference with lawful use of streets and highways, coercion and intimidation, whether of workers or employers, and other practices which have endangered the welfare of the entire state. Consequently, the Agricultural Council of California has given its approval to the initiative act scheduled for submission to California voters in November, which is designed to stamp out such abuses and make for peace in industrial relations.

Briefly, this act will: (1) permit employees voluntarily to organize in associations which are actually of their own choice, without coercion from any existing organization or from any other source; (2) limit the use of pickets to the actual parties to a labor dispute solely over wages, hours and physical conditions of employment; (3) limit the use of boycotts to such as are directed against an employer, by or at the request of the bona fide employees of such employer, solely because such a labor dispute exists between them; (4) declare the illegality of and prohibit sit-down and stay-in strikes; (5) keep the highways, docks, wharves and other channels of trade and commerce free from unreasonable burdens and interruptions not directly resulting from lawful activities of the actual parties to a bona fide labor dispute over wages, hours and physical conditions of employment; (6) adjust the balance of power between an employer and those members of a labor organization engaged in a bona fide labor dispute with such employer so that, whether such employer be large or small, true collective bargaining and a truly voluntary agreement between such employer and such organization of employees may obtain; and (7) preserve and protect the peace, safety, health and welfare of the people of California, whether members of the consuming public, the workers, or the employers.

Under the proposed act, picketing at any place of business shall not at any time exceed one for each entrance, provided, however, that a minimum of two pickets shall be allowed at each place.

Of vital importance to farmers, the act also provides "It shall be unlawful for any person to cause the driver in whose custody any vehicle is moving along any public place, to slow down or stop the progress of such vehicle or conveyance" with the intent to halt the delivery of produce, et cetera.

Another important proviso stipulates that "In the event a primary strike exists at some but not all of the places of business of an employer, those places of business of such employer at which no primary strike exists may not be picketed." The act also prohibits sit-down and stay-in strikes; regulates methods of picketing, pro-

Seeks Office As County Coroner

JERRY O'BRIEN

Jerry M. O'Brien, picked by political observers as an important contender for the Santa Clara County coroner and public administrator post in the August elections this week announced his platform of candidacy. The prominent San Josean is the first of the candidates for coroner to bring out a definite platform for the office.

In addition to his three-point platform, O'Brien makes definite provisions which he states he will act upon to correct past weaknesses and make possible a successful administration.

"As a candidate for coroner and public administrator in Santa Clara County, I offer a three-point platform which I believe will make it possible for the office to best serve public interests," said O'Brien.

"First, I will maintain a trained and efficient department which will be adequate for the needs of the entire county. Secondly, I will enforce the duties of coroner and public administrator completely, impartially and respectfully at all times. Third, I will dispatch all duties of coroner and public administrator by continuous, personal direction and supervision.

"In order to have the trained, efficient and adequate department necessary, I will have sufficient deputies appointed to serve every section of the county: one each in Los Gatos, Palo Alto, Morgan Hill, Gilroy and Mt. View. This action will serve two distinct purposes.

"First, delays to distressed families will be avoided and secondly, unnecessary expenses will be eliminated.

"Next, in order to carry out point number one of my platform, I would request the appointment of a district attorney deputy who would be the regular representative from that office at all inquests.

"Lastly, I would insure full service and attendance from the coroner's staff through knowledge of the office and all of the duties connected with it.

"In order to carry out point number two of my platform, I believe the coroner should select physicians, attorneys and court reporters impartially; by that I mean in alphabetical order.

"Funds of indigents, who became responsibilities of the county, have collected at the county hospital. According to law, these funds should be returned to the general fund of the county by the coroner.

"Also, I plan to adopt and put into practice the steps which have been taken and are being employed by coroners of this county to protect the public health.

"Lastly, and to fulfill the third point of my platform, that of dispatching the duties of the office by continuous and personal supervision, I will do just that. I will personally enforce the adherence of my staff to Christian principles and see that every person is given the right to retain the services of any funeral director he or she may desire, and through him to make all funeral arrangements.

"I shall conduct the office as outlined here and according to my training and knowledge of the office and the duties thereof. This is important in my estimation because unless the coroner is a funeral director, he must employ a funeral director to perform his duties and this of course means additional expense to the county.

"To conclude, I wish to state that I shall follow these dictates without guidance or interference of any political machine or clique." In submitting his platform to the public, O'Brien, the son of a family which has been resident in Santa Clara County since 1847, had the record of his training notarized. This statement shows proof that he is a graduate of the University of Santa Clara in business administration and business law, has completed four years of extension study in criminology and fingerprinting of the Institute of Applied Sciences, has completed four years of law study of La Salle University, Chicago, and is a trained funeral director operating his business under a license of the California State Board of Funeral Directors and Embalmers.

hibiting all forms of intimidation and coercion; provides that any person whose business has been injured by violations of the act may sue to recover damages; requires pickets to carry credentials from their union; sets up penalties for violations, etc.

THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE

Warns Against Improper Use of 'Shield Stickers'

All officers of the California highway patrol are strictly enforcing windshield sticker regulations, Chief E. Raymond Cato pointed out today in advising all motorists to use discretion in the use of stickers.

Chief Cato explained: "The motor vehicle code specifically states that no sticker or stickers shall cover an area in excess of seven inches by seven in the lower corner of the windshield farthest removed from the driver.

"The code definitely prohibits the use of stickers on either rear or side windows of a car.

"In a campaign year many motorists place stickers on their cars, but they should be careful to see that these stickers comply with code requirements and that the placement meets the specifications."

Chief Cato urged all tourists to keep these regulations in mind and pointed out that an offense against this section of the code is a misdemeanor.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Lewis and Miss Jessie Lewis were guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Purmort Friday on a motor trip to Big Basin, Santa Cruz and scenic spots along the way.

Mrs. Dorothea Smith Glass is here from San Fernando to be with her mother while Mrs. Lillian Voge is in Illinois. Mrs. Glass is librarian in a soldier's hospital in San Fernando. Mrs. Voge went east to visit her daughter and has prolonged her stay because of an unexpected appendicitis operation which her daughter has had.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When Charles Maurras came out of the Sante prison last year, he was met by a committee of distinguished Frenchmen, who nominated him for the Nobel peace prize and said they would make him a member of the Academy. They have just fulfilled the latter promise, and M. Maurras becomes an immortal by a majority of one vote.

He had spent 250 days in jail on a charge of having urged the assassination of 140 members of the chamber of deputies who had voted for sanctions against Italy; also on a charge of inciting the French people to "sharpen up their kitchen knives" for use against certain proscribed politicians.

In the 250 days he had written five books, swelling his vast collection of books on biography, politics, economics, literary criticism, history and what not to probably well over 100. I talked to him once in the Cafe des Lilas, a fragile, deaf, bearded old man with a contented, blazing mind which makes one think of a sizzling battery running an automobile without any engine.

In 1923, he was in jail for four months in a somewhat anti-climatic adventure for one who was to be garlanded as an immortal. Three members of the chamber of deputies were kidnapped and fed castor oil—Mussolini is said to have got his broad prospectus of Fascism from Maurras—and the bald head of one of them was painted with violet ink and glue.

In 1925, M. Maurras was sentenced to two years in prison, the charge being that he had threatened to kill the minister of the interior. Among the causes of his incarceration in October, 1936, was conspiracy evidence in the assault on Premier Leon Blum, in which he was severely beaten, while attending the funeral of a friend.

His books and virulent editorials against democracy in the Royalist, paper, translated into many languages, are the fount of Fascist doctrine all over the world. His hatred of democracy is savage and virulent. He is witty, learned, brilliant and he has the most exhorting and corrosive vocabulary in France.

FOOTNOTE to the main text of the world discussion on Japan bombing babies is the interchange between Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and William J. Bingham (Bill the Plugger), Harvard athletic director. Mr. Brundage says it has nothing to do with sports, and Mr. Bingham says it has—with sportsmanship, at any rate—and he withdraws from the committee and the 1940 games.

The sports writers are becoming almost metaphysical in weighing and appraising the moral values of the argument. Bill the Plugger says, in effect, that he won't play with baby-killers.

He became Bill the Plugger by losing 19 races at Harvard and winning the twentieth. Thereafter, he was Harvard's crack miler.

He started out plugging at the age of fourteen, leaving school to work in a mill and help support his five younger brothers and sisters. He saved $30, went to Exeter and worked his way through Exeter and Harvard.

He came out of the war a captain with appropriate decorations, did a turn in the banking business in Texas and became Harvard graduate supervisor and track coach in 1921. On the side, he is president of a concern which imports rubber goods.

IF GERARD B. LAMBERT builds a house, they're likely to find a center-board and a skyscraper on it. It's hard to see how he can get his mind off his yachting, but, at any rate, he becomes special adviser to Stuart McDonald, federal housing administrator.

The gargles and shaves of the multitudes built his chemical fortune at St. Louis. He was one of the original backers of Lindbergh and the originators of great advertising slogans.

Author of a spirited "Defense of Babbitts" in the American Mercury, commander of the Eastern Yacht club of Marblehead, Mass., he maintains a valhalla for gallant old yachts.

WAGES FOR REAL WORK

President, Opposing Outright Dole, Still Looking for Solution of Unemployment Problem

Speediest ship in our navy, the destroyer McCall, was commissioned at the Mare Island navy yard in California. The McCall, first privately built navy vessel since 1921, has a specified speed of 38½ knots, but in recent tests was reported to have averaged 42 knots. It carries four 5-inch guns and four quadruple torpedo tubes and is especially fitted for quick attacks on capital ships.

Spending Is a Stop-Gap

DECLARING the New Deal's objective is to give wages for real work and that he is opposed to the outright dole for bare existence, President Roosevelt said in a press conference that he is still looking for a permanent solution of the unemployment problem. He made it clear that he did not believe relief or public works afforded anything more than a stop-gap remedy for a little understood dislocation of the nation's economic and industrial life. In fact, he said, no country in the world had as yet worked out a method for dealing with the most acute unemployment situation in the history of the world.

He noted that public works expenditures had worked better in Sweden than in this country, because the Swedish government had been able in recent prosperous years to put on heavy taxes and pay off its borrowings. He said the Swedish method was being given close study. The President warned that the prosperity which vast outlays for rearmament appeared to have brought to European nations was unsound. When the munitions plants close down, he predicted, the nations of Europe will find themselves weaker in an economic sense than ever before. No nation, he argued, could spend its way back to prosperity by laying out vast sums in unproductive goods like weapons of war.

All federal spending agencies received instructions to launch the big spending push July 1, Mr. Roosevelt said. Funds will pour out through the Works Progress administration, the Public Works administration, the Civilian Conservation corps and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Aubrey Williams Scolded

AUBREY WILLIAMS, deputy WPA administrator, aroused the indignation of many citizens, especially of opponents of the administration, when he advised organized relief enrollees at a meeting in New York to keep the Roosevelt administration in power and to elect 100 per cent Roosevelt Democrats to office. He even incurred a mild rebuke from the senate committee created to investigate senatorial campaign fund expenditures and the use of public money to influence voters.

The committee pronounced Williams' speech "unfortunate" because of his position in the relief organization and uttered a warning against attempts by the spenders of the government's relief and pump priming billions to influence the votes of beneficiaries.

Williams sent a letter to the committee claiming there was no political intent in his speech and asserting he had been misquoted.

Farmers Oust a Union

FIVE hundred angry farmers invaded the Richland Co-operative creamery at Richland Center, Wis., to which they sell their milk, and drove out seven employees of a teamsters' union. They then forced the remaining employees to sign statements that they would not join a labor organization, and established a picket line to keep out union members and organizers.

The demonstration was the climax of five months' resistance by the co-operative's directors, members and patrons against the organization of the plant by the American Federation of Labor teamsters' union. At the insistence of the national labor relations board, the creamery had just agreed to accept the union as a bargaining agent and not to oppose recognition further. N. S. Clark, Milwaukee regional director of the labor board, had agreed to withdraw charges of unfair labor practices against the company.

Clark said later that all offers toward a compromise with the creamery had been withdrawn. The farmers who took part in the demonstration had outlawed themselves, he said, and declared he would ask the Washington office of the labor board to prosecute them.

Indiana G.O.P. Picks Willis

RAYMOND E. WILLIS of Angola, Ind., a newspaper publisher and veteran political leader, was nominated for the senate by the state Republican convention in Indianapolis. Willis was named on the third ballot, defeating four rivals among whom was James E. Watson, former senator.

The nominee, who is sixty-two years old, has been the active editor and publisher of his weekly paper, the Angola Republican, since its establishment in 1898. He is president of the Steuben Publishing company, and, with another editor at its head, publishes the Angola Herald, a Democratic organ.

Fish Attacks Hamilton

HEATED discussion over immediate control of campaign funds among members of the Republican national executive committee, meeting in Washington, gave Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York an opportunity to renew his fight on National Chairman John Hamilton, whose removal he demanded.

With Hamilton out of power, Fish said, the Republicans would win 10 senate seats and 100 house seats. With Hamilton at the helm, he warned, Republican gains would be reduced by half.

Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Sen. John Townsend of Delaware, chairmen, respectively, of the house and senate G. O. P. campaign committees, have demanded allotment of funds from the national committee and exclusive control of their expenditure. Hamilton has resisted these demands.

Representative Bertrand Snell of New York, Republican leader in the house, told the committee that he intended to retire from public life and would not seek re-election this fall.

Italy Checks Franco

VIRGINIO GAYDA, noted editor and spokesman for the Fascist regime in Italy, declared that Italy had advised Franco, leader of the Spanish insurgents, to use "moderation" in his efforts to prevent British and other foreign ships from bringing supplies to government Spain. Gayda said, however, that Italy approved the bombing of vessels carrying contraband, but disclaimed any Italian responsibility therefor.

Representations by the earl of Perth, British ambassador to Rome, had opened the way to an agreement to end the bombings. Mussolini was reported as ready to act only to spare Prime Minister Chamberlain from embarrassment.

London dispatches said Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany had agreed to split the cost of withdrawing foreign troops from Spain. Russia refused to pay a full share of the expense, estimated at 10 million dollars.

Signs of Compromise

THERE are distinct indications of compromise and co-operation in the American picture, and hopes for restored prosperity are somewhat revived. The stock market has become unusually active, and private enterprise is awakening. Unfreezing of three billions in stored-up credit is expected to result from new banking regulations ordered by the President. Thousands of contracts for approved projects to cost almost $500,000,000 have been sent to all parts of the country by the Public Works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his latest radio address to the nation, said: "In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get," and it seems that the people are ready to give that help if the administration will do its part.

Notable in the President's talk was the admission that mistakes have been made not only by his opponents and by industry and labor, but also by government leaders. He sharply attacked reactionaries in business, blaming them for much of the current depression.

Asserting his continued belief in individual enterprise and the profit motive, he criticized the recent congress for failing to enact his program for government reorganization and legislation to aid the financially depressed railroad industry. At the same time, however, he said the legislators "achieved more for the future good of the country than any congress between the end of the World war and the spring of 1933."

Wants Liberals Elected

MOST of the President's radio speech was frankly political. He declared himself the leader of the liberals and held that, as such, it was his privilege to intervene in state primary and election campaigns for the purpose of insuring the defeat of those whom he characterized as conservatives, the opponents of his policies.

This aroused the indignation of many Democratic statesmen like Senators Burke of Nebraska and King of Utah.

Senator King asserted the President should not use the great advantage he has in controlling the purse strings of the huge spending program. "People who have fought for the Democratic party for a great many years do not like interference in their state affairs by outsiders," he said. "I do not believe the President should meddle in the primary elections of the Democratic party or any other party."

General opinion was that Mr. Roosevelt had widened the split in the Democratic party and by his words had placed the stamp of his approval on the attempted "purge" directed by Corcoran, Cohen and others of his advisers.

For Naval Expansion

IMPETUS was given the naval expansion program with PWA allotments of $27,883,000 for the enlargement, extension and remodeling of existing plants and facilities of the navy department.

With orders for full speed ahead the navy department said that 113 projects, approved by Mr. Roosevelt, will be under way by August 15. Among the projects are power plant improvements, foundry building, high frequency radio station, fleet moorings, turret assembly facilities, improvements to ship building ways, structural assembly, electric and sheet metal shops, water storage, railroad tracks, noncommissioned officers' quarters, storage buildings and other improvements.

Mustn't Seize Hainan

THE British and French envoys in Tokyo warned Japan that any occupation of Hainan, Chinese island off the south coast of China, would be met by joint Franco-British action. The island, which lies near French and British trade routes, was bombed by Japanese flyers.

Germany is recalling the Germans who have been acting as advisers to the Chinese army, and diplomats believe Germany may now give active aid to Japan.

Swedes Celebrate

AMERICANS of Swedish descent by the thousand and many from Sweden gathered at Wilmington, Del., for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing in America of the first Swedes and Finns. From the old country came Crown Prince Gustaf Adol with a large party, but he was confined to his suite on the liner Kungsholm by illness. His place was taken by his son, Prince Bertil.

The principal event of the opening ceremony was the presentation of a monument erected by Sweden on the landing site. The presentation was made by Prince Bertil and accepted by President Roosevelt. Then the President presented the monument to Gov. Richard McMullen for the state of Delaware.

After the monument ceremony there was a lawn party attended by Crown Princess Louise.

The celebration was continued for four days in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, parts of which states were embraced in the New Sweden founded in 1638 by a company of 150 Swedes and Finns sent to America by Gustafus Adolphus.

School Trustees Forget

Santa Barbara.—Forgetfulness of school trustees of isolated Wasioj school district deep in the mountains of Santa Barbara county caused Leon Furrow a 265-mile motor trip that he might determine the date of a school bond issue election by reading the notice tacked on a fence post at the school. The district desires to build an $8000 school for the children of the scattered ranches. They neglected to inform County School Superintendent Edwards the election date. There are no telephones in the district, the nearest instrument located at a forest ranger station thirty miles away. Rangers are not permitted to leave their posts at this season of potential forest fire hazard.

Marin Auto Ferry to End

San Francisco.—Abandonment by July 28 of the San Francisco-Sausalito auto ferry service of the Southern Pacific-Golden Gate Ferries Ltd., was ordered in an unanimous decision of the State Railroad Commission. At the same time the commission expressed the opinion the San Francisco-Oakland auto ferries, if relieved of the financial drain of continued losses on the Sausalito run, could operate economically at the present rates—30 cents one way, and 50 cents round trip. The decision was reached after the California Toll Bridge Authority had requested the Commission to restore ferry rates to a parity with bridge tolls, of 50 cents a trip, with no reduction for round trip.

Road Through Tree

Sequoia National Park.—This park now has a road built through a Sequoia, rivaling the old Wawona tree in the Mariposa big tree grove. The Sequoia Park tree, however, is a fallen giant and the road has been tunneled through, double width, as it fell across the Crescent Meadow road and no other route could be constructed. The tunnel tree is at Soldier Camp, near the Mather plaque road. It had been undermined by too much water in the meadow and toppled over during the winter, breaking on the rocks and road banks.

Giant Sequoia Dedicated

Sequoia National Park.—A great sequoia tree is now standing as a living memorial to Susan B. Anthony, pioneer leader of the American feminist movement. More than 1,800 persons gathered recently in Round Meadows at dedication ceremonies. United States Senator William Gibbs McAdoo and Governor Frank F. Merriam spoke, and Senator McAdoo read a message from President Roosevelt.

More CCC Enrollment

Washington.—Director Robert Fechner of the Civilian Conservation Corps has announced the agency would enroll 79,607 men in 48 States and the District of Columbia. Enrollment, he said, would start July 1 and was calculated to bring the corps' strength to its maximum of 300,000, exclusive of Indians and territorials. The enrollment in California will total 3026.

Former Mayor Passes

Porterville.—Anton Konda, 74 years of age, former mayor and owner of extensive holdings, died at his home recently following a long illness. Konda, a native of Austria, came here fifty-four years ago, engaging in sheep and cattle raising. He later acquired considerable property and became active in politics.

"Bridge Mothers" Scored

Alien Votes Fifty Years

San Diego.—Abraham Mathison, born in Norway, has been voting for fifty years without benefit of citizenship, he revealed recently in Superior court, where his naturalization petition was approved by Judge Arthur L. Mundo. The new citizen, a resident of the United States since 1879, said that a Chicago judge gave him an oath in 1889 and told him he was a citizen and eligible to vote. He recently learned he wasn't a citizen.

Midsummer Fashions For Tea and Tennis

TWO of the most important things for midsummer are: a sleeveless dress of the most casual sort for sports and daytime, and a cool dress with cape or jacket, to wear on the street and for afternoons. The two here suggested represent the very best of these types. Make them yourself, in fabrics and colors of your own choosing, and rejoice in the knowledge that you have some very individual new clothes, and got them very economically! Each pattern includes a detailed sew chart.

Sleeveless Sports Frock.

Even if you never take a tennis racquet in your hand, you'll enjoy having this cool, classic dress for summer daytimes. In pique, linen, seersucker or gingham, it will look and feel so cool and fresh! Perfectly straight and plain, it has darts at the waistline to make it fit with becoming slenderness. This is a diagram pattern—practically nothing to make! In just a few hours you'll have it all ready to button on at your shoulders.

Afternoon Cape Ensemble.

With or without the cape, this dress with lifted waistline to flatten the midriff, is a charming, slenderizing style. The cape is a darling—puffed high at the shoulders, and made with arm slits so that it won't be always slipping off your shoulders. Make this design in georgette, chiffon, linen, or in a pretty combination of plain or printed silk, and you'll have a very distinguished, expensive-looking ensemble.

The Patterns.

Pattern No. 1544 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material for the dress; 2¼ for the cape; to line cape, 2¼ yards.

Pattern No. 1546 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40 and 42. Size 14 requires 3 yards of 35 inch material. 3½ yards bias binding to trim as pictured.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about her flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Siege of Troy Recounted in Homer's Story

By ELIZABETH C. JAMES

THE story of "The Iliad" by Homer takes place during the Trojan war and relates the wrath of Achilles, greatest of warriors.

It is now the ninth year of siege when Homer begins his epic and the Greeks are encamped on the shores of Asia Minor, besieging Troy. They are dejected as the poem begins, for their hero will not fight. The mighty Achilles sulks in his tent.

Agamemnon, commander of Greek forces, had demanded a slave girl who had previously been awarded to Achilles as part of the spoils of battle. Thus unjustly treated by his commander, Achilles retired to his tents with his followers and refused to fight.

During the days of this quarrel, conversations among the men relate previous happenings.

Helen, most beautiful woman of history, was wooed by every prince of Greece. To protect the fortunate winner, all these chieftains swore to defend Helen, should the necessity ever arise. She finally chose Menelaus to be her husband. Sometime after this, Paris of Troy, a handsome youth, came to visit at the palace of Menelaus. When he returned, he took Helen back to Troy with him. Thus all Greek chieftains were called upon to fulfill their vows and reclaim Helen.

Pretends to Be Mad.

Ulysses, happily married, did not wish to go on such a quest. He pretended madness, and plowed the fields, sowing salt.

TRADITIONAL POET

The Iliad and the Odyssey were recited or performed every four years at Athens during the classical period. Homer is the traditional poet of these two poems; he has no existence apart from his poetry. The facts of his life are traditional or are surmised from his writings.

As far back as the classical period in Greece, Homer was an ancient poet. The classical Greeks made translations of his work, they wrote lives of Homer, they taught his poems and made analyses of his work. The language which he used in the original poems was ancient to the classical Greeks.

When the boats were ready to sail for Troy, the winds stopped. An oracle explained that a maiden of royal birth must be sacrificed. So, Iphigenia, daughter of Agamemnon, was made a human propitiation to the god of winds.

Nine years of encampment then followed with neither side gaining much advantage. Meanwhile within the walls of Troy, Helen's great beauty had so completely captured the Trojan people that they fought madly to keep her within their city.

Hector Challenges.

Then occurred the incident of the slave girl and Achilles' wrath. Hector, the greatest warrior of Troy, came forth and issued a challenge for individual combat. But no one answered. Achilles was the only man to fight this Trojan warrior, and Achilles would not fight. Then Patroclus, dear friend of Achilles, borrowed the armor of Achilles and went forth to uphold the fair name of Greece.

From his tents Achilles saw his friend die. With a roar he rushed into the battle, but he had no armor. He would recover Patroclus' body for burial. The sound of his voice was enough; the Trojans were back inside the wall.

Achilles must have new armor. His goddess mother came and offered to have a suit forged in the fires of Vulcan.

Achilles Fights Hector.

Clad in his new armor, Achilles sought Hector for combat. The mighty warriors were evenly matched. Around they circled, each seeking an opening in the other's guard. Time passed, yet they fought furiously, neither gaining advantage over the other. A goddess favoring Achilles flew down from Olympus and clouded the eyes of Hector, so that Achilles succeeded in smiting him a powerful stroke with his sword. Hector lay in the dust, his plumes and fine clothing despoiled. A wall went up from the tops of the walls of Troy as Achilles fastened things in the heels of Hector and tied him to his chariot, then drove madly round the walls of Troy.

Late at night there came a visitor to the tents of Achilles. It was Priam, aged king of Troy and father of Hector. Weeping, he pleaded for the body of his son, he recounted the glory of Hector and with tears of love he proved that Hector was too noble to be forced to wander forever through the shades for lack of proper burial. Achilles heard his prayer with compassion and gave to him the body of his son.

New Fabrics of Sheer Loveliness

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A FAVORITE theme this summer is the sheer loveliness of diaphanous, airy-fairy transparent fabrics, either cotton or silk. The new sheers are simply enchanting and they are the sought-for kind to make up into gowns for picturesque garden party wear or for dancing under star-spangled skies or when dining at fashionable roof-garden gatherings where beauty and romance keep rendezvous.

Gowns designed to grace summertime scenes are fashioned of wispy chiffons either printed or monotone, or of organdies crisp, sheer and intriguing, or of dainty silk marquise which is an especial favorite. Then there are the soft fine cotton voiles in pretty colors and as for lace every summer wardrobe is expected to include at least one party frock made of it. As a matter of fact lace is playing a stellar role this summer. The lace that captures the heart of enthusiasts is a delicate-as-cobweb type the patterning of which is a mere tracery. Gowns of this fetching lace have all-around pleated skirts, since it yields beautifully to this treatment.

To dine and dance in ingenuitous frocks of simple cottons made up formally is considered quite the swank thing to do. The thrilling note in regard to this season's organdies is that so many new types have been added to the list.

The crinkled organdies either plain or printed sell at sight. They make up charmingly and are easily tubbed, require little or no pressing to keep them crisp and sprightly as new. For week-end trips they are ideal as they do not crush in packing.

You will be delighted with the new lace-printed Swiss chiffon organdies. The entrancing frock centered with outspread skirt in the foreground gives an idea of how effectively the lace-stripe organdie makes up. The charming and picturesque Winterhalter vogue is reflected in the styling of this very tiny-waisted and full-skirted dinner-and-dancing gown (a winsome garden party frock, too) in one of the fashionable printed Swiss chiffon organdies. A very fine lace patterning in white stands out clearly against a deep navy blue background. There is a full-cut underskirt of white organdie to make the frock stand out almost on ballet skirt lines. The diminutive bolero jacket worn over the drop-shoulder bodice is finished with little ruffles of val lace laid on over the lace print.

The material that fashions the frock to the left is peach silk mousseline. It is prettily styled with vertical ruche-ruffling of self-fabric outlining the skirt gores, the puffed sleeves and there are ruffles about the neck.

Hyacinth blue lace with touches of cerise lace is used for the graceful gown centered in the picture. It was introduced at the Miami fashion show and is one of those pleasing types that carry on into new triumphs for summer party wear. One of its charms is that the lace indicates stripes and striped effects lead in the mode.

The printed chiffon frock to the left gives a delightful interpretation of the slim silhouette for summer. The patterning is spaced tulips in blue, red, green and black on a sheer white background. The gathered bodice suggests the Directoire. Contrasting shades of green and blue silk make the girdle and sash which forms a train. Flower bracelets are worn with it and an enormous poppy on the head instead of a hat, which goes to show the intriguing and unique ways flowers now play their important role in costume ensembling.

HANDSOME SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One handsome suit like the model pictured, in your wardrobe and your problem is solved as to looking smartly attired for any occasion. Contrast stitching is a swank accent to the interesting detail of his well-tailored town and country suit in fine lightweight wool shetland. Note the scalloped pockets and repeat the decorative stitching at the seams in the skirt.

TWISTED DRAPES ARE NEW STYLE FEATURE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Designers are performing all sorts of interesting tricks with twisted drapes and as time goes on the idea is taking on added interest.

When you see a dress or blouse the drapes of which tie themselves into fanciful knots or twist into clever intricacies be assured that the garment is a "last word" fashion. Be on the lookout for these inter-twisted, inter-coiled effects and choose your new frocks accordingly.

This type of styling invites the use of color contrasts. For instance, the bodice top of a navy dress may have drapes coming from the shoulder, say in the new fuchsia shade, the same coiled, twisted and perhaps knotted across the bustline with infinite grace. Or the dress may be in monotone, the artful, twisted designfulness being the only trimming feature. White crepe frocks, with twists done in crepes of vivid contrast or carried out in pastel tones are top notch fashion this summer.

A new feature in styling is the all-over shirred bodice with skirt of the material simply tailored. The all-over shirred jacket is likewise a fashion highlight. Chiffon and sheer marquise yield to this treatment most charmingly.

Paquin Favorite

A favorite Paquin model for evening is the long skirt of bias topped by a marquise blouse, the entire thing in white, black or pale rose.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system.

Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed

You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of over-indulgence — without meeting bodily requirements.

The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample. What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet

Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials

There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily.

Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance

The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check the Diet for Balance

Perhaps you are like the homemakers who tell me that they do not know a protein from a carbohydrate. Or it may be that while you understand the difference, you do not know what quantities should be included in the diet each day.

To simplify your task of serving balanced menus at every meal, I have prepared a Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance. In convenient chart form, it shows what foods should be included in the diet every day and gives the standard amount for each food. There are also skeleton menus outlined by food classifications, which enable you to plan balanced menus for every meal by making a choice from each group of required foods.

I urge every homemaker to write for this chart and use it daily. Then you won't make such common mistakes as serving a dried legume as a vegetable at a meal in which meat is used, which tends to concentrate too much protein in one meal; or choosing a too-heavy dessert following a main course that is overly rich in carbohydrates.

60 Per Cent Carbohydrates

Carbohydrates should form at least 60 per cent of the supply of food fuel. Rarely are menus deficient in carbohydrates, because they are so widely distributed in such common foods as cereals, bread, potatoes, macaroni products, sweets, and sweet fruits and

Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance

PLANNING a balanced diet will cease to be a puzzle if you send for the Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance, offered free, by C. Houston Goudiss.

It lists the foods and the standard amounts that should be included in the daily diet, and includes skeleton menus for breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper, to guide you in selecting the proper foods in each classification.

vegetables, such as oranges, grapes, apples and peas.

Fats should supply about 20 per cent of the caloric content of the diet. They are obtained from butter, margarine, cream, egg yolk, salad dressings, vegetable oils and the fat of meats.

A protein food should be provided at each meal. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, cheese, milk and most nuts supply complete protein. Cereals and legumes furnish incomplete protein which may be supplemented by the complete protein of milk.

The Protective Foods

It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.

CAUTION!

DON'T SOAK FALSE TEETH

Don't take chances. Soaking dental plates in "cleaning" solutions changes their color in a few months. They turn dingy and dull, loosen and fall apart. Dentists advise brushing with powder. A dent dental powder is guaranteed to quickly clean and remove stains and odors without injury to plate or teeth. Be safe. Your dentist's seal of approval is the one that protects you.
